Field Representative Guest Speaker at TB Meeting

Paul Harris of Little Rock, field representative of the State Tuberculosis Assn., was guest speaker at a dinner meeting of officers and directors of the Nevada County Tuberculosis Association on Tuesday night at the Lawson Hotel. He spoke on the progress the association has made during the past year and some of the problems it still faces. A film entitled "Are You Positive?" was shown by Mr. Harris.

Mrs. J. A. Cole, county president presided at the meeting and Mrs. T. E. Logan gave the invocation. Mrs. Max Kitchen introduced the 21 members who were present and Dr. Charles Hesterly gave the high lights of a tuberculosis meeting he attended in Shreveport. Mrs. Howard Graham, executive secretary of the county assn., had two posters on display that she had made showing how tuberculosis is contracted.

Nixon Claims Draws a Demo Challenge

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Vice President Nixon's claim that there has been a dramatic upsurge in Republican strength in the congressional campaign drew a Democratic challenge today.

Rep. Eugene McCarthy, contesting GOP Sen. Edward J. Thyne, said Nixon was whistling in the dark with a statement on Sunday night that there had been a striking shift in voter opinion in the last 10 days.

"If this has happened, no one but Nixon has been able to discern it," McCarthy said in an interview. "I have been campaigning four months and there is nothing to indicate a change in the Democratic tide."

Minnesota is regarded in the Republican camp as one of the states where the GOP may be able to stem the Democratic current that seems likely to increase the latter party's hold on both houses of Congress.

Local observers count Democratic Gov. Orville Freeman as a sure bet for re-election over his Republican opponent George Mackinnon.

Nixon said anybody who tries to predict the outcome of this and other races across the nation at this point is likely to "find himself as confused as a beginner with a hula hoop." He said polls, which predict a Democratic victory, reflect conditions of 10 days ago, not now.

"It is in these last 10 days," Nixon said, "that I personally have witnessed the most striking shift of voter opinion that I have ever seen in any political campaign."

With this in mind, McCarthy said he wondered if Nixon got his information on Minnesota in South Dakota and Nebraska — the two states where the vice president campaigned Saturday.

The bureau forecasts a continued decline in Arkansas' population.

Peterson said the Census Bureau assumes that civilian migrations of previous years also will prevail in the future. "This is like predicting that another World War II and a Korean-type war will occur during the next 17 years," he said.

Peterson said Arkansas' population losses have been significant only in war-time years that they have not affected the state's "dynamic economy."

The research expert's opinions were contained in the first edition of "The Arkansas Economist," a magazine published by the university's Bureau of Business and Economic Research and the Industrial Research and Extension Center.

was accompanied by wild confusion over the smoke signs. After every two votes the ballots are burned in a stove inside the chapel. If a pope has been elected, the papers are burned alone and white smoke is supposed to spiral from the chimney. If there has been no election, a handful of damp straw is added and black smoke is supposed to come out.

Something went wrong Sunday. After the morning ballots, a cloud of white smoke shot up just before noon, and many in the crowd of about 60,000 in the square set up shouts of joy. In a moment the smoke turned to gray and finally black.

A throng of nearly 200,000 in the square awaited the second signal at nightfall.

This time white smoke rolled out the chimney for fully five minutes.

"A pope is elected," declared the Vatican radio. News agencies sent the word around the world. The crowd cheered and waved handkerchiefs.

Even Vatican officials were fooled.

The Palatine Guard was called from its barracks to proceed to St. Peter's Basilica for the formal announcement of the new pontiff's name.

Then uncertainty set in. The guards were sent back to their barracks. When 20 minutes had passed without a new pope appearing on the balcony, the doubt spread rapidly. Finally the crowd began to disperse.

There was confusion in the palace until assurances finally were received from within the conclave that black smoke was intended.

for sophomores.

The Baptist high school and several other interim church schools were set up to take care of the overflow.

At Conway, a college operated by Missionary Baptists planned to enroll between 120 and 130 Little Rock white students in a new high school division today.

W. L. Burgess, principal of the division, said classes would start Nov. 3.

No private school has been established for negro students, whose public high school also was closed.

The Governor's closing order last month left a total of 3,699 high school students without classrooms. However, many of them found other ways to continue their studies.

DOROTHY DIX

Discontented Doll Sinks Into a Deep Depression

Dear Dorothy Dix:

All through life I have been slightly below average in everything — looks, brains, ability. My high school record was poor. When I went to work I was an indifferent stenographer, only tolerated because of the shortage in that field. Then I met a man who was definitely above average and married him. He's much more than I ever deserved but I am not happy. I find fault with everything and everybody. I'm unhappy myself and know I have a bad effect on other people. Maybe I need a doctor — but what kind? Do I need him for my body or my mind? I want so much to overcome this disagreeable feeling. What can I do — Depressed

Dear Depressed: You need treatment in three areas — body, mind and soul. Go to the very best medical doctor you can find — to a clinic — and have a thorough physical examination. It'll put you in a clergyman and let him put you in tune with God. As for your mind, try thinking for yourself, and if that doesn't work, see a psychiatrist. Disagreeable people are usually selfish. They don't think of anyone but themselves, never give a thought to the misery of others, or consider what they could do about it. Keep a smile on your face and a cheerful record on your internal hi-fi. Both may seem strained at first but the smile will soon be spontaneous and the sweet words will come naturally. Finally, send a starved, self-addressed envelope for my leaflet, "Glimpse of Glow," which lists a lot of sure-fire, blues-chasing books, as well as books that tell how to change a bad disposition into a cheerful one. Lift up your spirit, look at the stars and you won't be bothered with petty fault-finding.

Dear Dorothy Dix:

I live in a college town and last year I dated one of the students. While he was in school he dated only me, then he went home for the summer and went with other girls. Now that he's back on the campus he's dating me again. He says he loves me but does nothing to prove it. Last week his first had a dance. I bought a new formal, assuming, of course, that he'd take me. A few days before the dance he told me he had invited a girl from his home town. Where do you think I stand? — Hilda

Dear Hilda: Quite frankly, I think you're a pretty girl in the college town with whom he can have pleasant dates and mild diversion. The boy has a long way to go before he can get serious about anyone. He has his education to finish, the army to satisfy, and his profession to start. Right now he's wise not to tie himself down. He would be worth waiting for — if you're patient. If you're anxious to get married, look away from the campus.

Dear Dorothy Dix:

I'm 17 and have been secretly married for two months. The boy has a bad reputation and my parents always objected to him. I love him dearly. What should I do? — Missy

Dear Missy: Tell your parents at once and accept whatever consequences they suggest. Boys with bad reputations who coerce girls into secret marriages do not, as a rule, make good husbands.

Dear Dorothy Dix:

After our marriage, I came to live in my husband's home town — a town composed exclusively of his relatives, as far as I've been able to see. I have in-laws to the right of me, left of me, behind me and in front of me. We have absolutely no social life of our own. these loving relatives. We'd like to go to a community of new homes, where there would be young people for companionship, better transportation, shopping and a better job for my husband. We're tired of living the life of an elderly, retired couple. I've always been on very good terms with my in-laws and hate to hurt them, but I do want a life of our own. Is this wrong — Janis G.

Dear Janis: No — but it will take a lot of diplomatic talking to convince the other members of the retired folks' community. Clannishness dies hard with some people. Make the move with as much grace as you can. In time,

Field Representative Guest Speaker at TB Meeting

Paul Harris of Little Rock, field representative of the State Tuberculosis Assn., was guest speaker at a dinner meeting of officers and directors of the Nevada County Tuberculosis Association on Tuesday night at the Lawson Hotel. He spoke on the progress the association has made during the past year and some of the problems it still faces. A film entitled "Are You Positive?" was shown by Mr. Harris.

Mrs. J. A. Cole, county president presided at the meeting and Mrs. E. E. Logan gave the invocation. Mrs. Max Killeen introduced the 21 members who were present and Dr. Charles Hestley gave the high lights of a tuberculosis meeting he attended in Shreveport. Mrs. Howard Graham, executive secretary of the county assn., had two posters on display that she had made showing how tuberculosis is contracted.

Beauty Unit 11 Meets
Beauty Unit 11 held their October meeting on Tuesday evening at Mary's Beauty Shop in Gurdion with 11 members present.

Hair styles were demonstrated and delegates were appointed to the State Convention to be held in Little Rock Nov. 1-3. Those from Prescott attending the meeting were Mrs. Elizabeth Wilson, president, Miss Judy Horne, Mrs. Mary Jo Arnold and Mrs. Della Stewart.

The next meeting will be held in Elizabeth's Beauty Shop in Prescott Tuesday night, Nov. 11.

Nixon Claims Draws a Demo Challenge

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Vice President Nixon's claim that there has been a dramatic upsurge in Republican strength in the congressional campaign drew a Democratic challenge today.

Rep. Eugene McCarthy, contesting GOP Sen. Edward J. Thye, said Nixon was whistling in the dark with a statement on Sunday night that there had been a striking shift in voter opinion in the last 10 days.

"If this has happened, no one but Nixon has been able to discern it," McCarthy said in an interview. "I have been campaigning four months and there is nothing to indicate a change in the Democratic tide."

Minnesota is regarded by the Republican camp as one of the states where the GOP may be able to stem the Democratic current that seems likely to increase the latter party's hold on both houses of Congress.

Local observers count Democratic Gov. Orville Freeman as a sure bet for re-election over his Republican opponent George Mackinnon.

Nixon said anybody who tries to predict the outcome of this and other races across the nation at this point is likely to find himself as confused as a beginner with a hula hoop. He said polls which predict a Democratic victory reflect conditions of 10 days ago, not now.

"It is in these last 10 days," Nixon said, "that I personally have witnessed the most striking shift of voter opinion that I have ever seen in any political campaign."

With this in mind, McCarthy said he wondered if Nixon got his information on Minnesota in South Dakota and Nebraska — the two states where the vice president campaigned Saturday.

Sees Increase in State Population

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — University of Arkansas research specialist believes Arkansas can look forward to an increase in population.

The prediction of Dr. John M. Peterson, a staff member of the university's Industrial Research and Extension Center here, contrasts with projections of the U.S. Census Bureau.

The bureau forecasts a continued decline in Arkansas' population.

Peterson said the Census Bureau assumes that civilian migrations of previous years also will prevail in the future. "This is like predicting that another World War II and a Korean-type war will occur during the next 17 years," he said.

Peterson said Arkansas' population losses have been significant only in wartime years that they have not affected the state's "dynamic economy."

The research expert's opinions were contained in the first edition of "The Arkansas Economist," a magazine published by the university's Bureau of Business and Economic Research and the Industrial Research and Extension Center.

was accompanied by wild confusion over the smoke signals.

After every two votes the ballots are burned in a stove inside the chapel. If a pope has been elected, the papers are burned alone and white smoke is supposed to signal from the chimney. If there has been no election, a handful of damp straw is added and black smoke is supposed to come out.

Something went wrong Sunday. After the morning ballots, a cloud of white smoke shot up just before noon, and many in the crowd of about 60,000 in the square sent up shouts of joy. In a moment the smoke turned to gray and finally black.

A throng of nearly 200,000 in the square awaited the second signal at nightfall.

This time white smoke rolled out the chimney for fully five minutes.

"A pope is elected," declared the Vatican radio. News agencies sent the word around the world. The crowd cheered and waved handkerchiefs.

Even Vatican officials were fooled.

The Papal Guard was called from its barracks to proceed to St. Peter's Basilica for the formal announcement of the new pope's name.

Then uncertainty set in. The guards were sent back to their barracks. When 20 minutes had passed without a new pope appearing on the balcony, the doubt spread rapidly. Finally the crowd began to disperse.

There was confusion in the palace until assurances finally were received from within the conclave that black smoke was intended.

There was no official explanation of the mixup.

Friday Music Club Meets in Williams Home

Last week, the Friday Music Club met in the home of Mrs. W. A. Williams. An interesting and entertaining program on "Sacred Music" was presented by Mrs. Sam Strong.

Mrs. E. P. Young Jr. sang the "Twenty Third Psalm," accompanying herself at the piano. Mrs. Hendrix Spraggins played some sacred music for the organ by Bach.

Mrs. Spraggins at the organ and Mrs. B. C. Hyatt playing the piano combined their talents in a presentation of "O For A Thousand Tongues to Sing." To complete the program, Mrs. Spraggins and Mrs. Hyatt accompanied the group singing a group of familiar hymns.

The hostess served a tasty salad plate and coffee to 17 ladies, including one guest, Miss Gail Jacks of DeQueen. At the present time Miss Jacks is a practice teacher in the Hope schools.

Sherman Adams Finally Steps Out

LINCOLN, N.H. (AP)—Without fanfare, Sherman Adams has stepped out of the White House, where for six years he was President Eisenhower's chief assistant.

He came home to this small community in the White Mountains Saturday night without stirring a ripple of excitement.

Adams won't say what he plans to do for the present, or in the future, for that matter.

"I have no statement to make at all," he told a reporter.

Adams announced his resignation from the White House job in a nationwide television and radio talk Sept. 22.

He didn't fix the date to quit then, saying only he would stay on until there had been an orderly transfer to others of the work he had been doing.

White House Press Secretary James C. Hagerty said in Washington that Adams had left after a farewell chat with the President.

Adams decided to quit under mounting political pressure after a House subcommittee dug publicly into his relations with Bernard Goldfine, a Boston millionaire.

DOROTHY DIX

Discontented Doll Sinks Into a Deep Depression

Dear Dorothy Dix:

All through life I have been slightly below average in everything — looks, brains, ability. My high school record was poor. When I went to work I was an indifferent stenographer, only tolerated because of the shortage in that field. Then I met a man who was definitely above average and married him. He's much more than I ever deserved but I am not happy. I find fault with everything and everybody. I'm unhappy myself and know I have a bad effect on other people. Maybe I need a doctor — but what kind? Do I need him for my body or my mind? I want so much to overcome this disagreeable feeling. What can I do — Depressed.

Dear Depressed: You need treatment in three areas — body, mind and soul. Go to the very best medical doctor you can find — to a clinic — and have a thorough physical examination. I'll put you in a clergyman and let him put you in tune with God. As for your mind, try thinking for yourself, and if that doesn't work, see a psychiatrist. Disagreeable people are usually selfish. They don't think of anyone but themselves, never give a thought to the misery of others, or consider what they could do about it. Keep a smile on your face and a cheerful record on your internal hi-fi. Both may seem strained at first but the smile will soon be spontaneous and the sweet words will come naturally. Finally, send a stamped, self-addressed envelope for my leaflet, "Glum To Glow," which lists a lot of sure-fire, blues-chasing books, as well as books that tell how to change a bad disposition into a cheerful one. Lift up your spirit, look at the stars and you won't be bothered with petty fault-finding.

Dear Dorothy Dix:

I live in a college town and last year I dated one of the students. While he was in school he dated only me, then he went home for the summer and went with other girls. Now that he's back on the campus he's dating me again. He says he loves me but does nothing to prove it. Last week his frat had a dance. I bought a new formal, assuming, of course, that he'd take me. A few days before the dance he told me he had invited a girl from his home town. Where do you think I stand? — Hilda

Dear Hilda: Quite frankly, I think you're a pretty girl in the college town with whom he can have pleasant dates and mild diversion. The boy has a long way to go before he can get serious about anyone. He has his education to finish, the army to satisfy, and his profession to start. Right now he's wise not to tie himself down. He would be worth waiting for — if you're patient. If you're anxious to get married, look away from the campus.

Dear Dorothy Dix:

I'm 17 and have been secretly married for two months. The boy has a bad reputation and my parents always objected to him. I love him dearly. What should I do? — Missy

Dear Missy: Tell your parents at once and accept whatever consequences they suggest. Boys with bad reputations who coerce girls into secret marriages do not, as a rule, make good husbands.

Dear Dorothy Dix:

After our marriage, I came to live in my husband's home town — a town composed exclusively of his relatives, as far as I've been able to see. I have in-laws to the right of me, left of me, behind me and in front of me. We have absolutely no social life of our own. We both want to move, but the very suggestion causes a torrent of outraged protest from these loving relatives. We'd like to go to a community of new homes, where there would be young people for companionship, better transportation, shopping and a better job for my husband. We're tired of living the life of an elderly, retired couple. I've always been on very good terms with my in-laws and hate to hurt them, but I do want a life of our own. Is this wrong? — Janis G.

Dear Janis: Nooooo—but it will take a lot of diplomatic talking to convince the other members of the retired folks' community. Cleanness dies hard with some people. Make the move with as much grace as you can. In time,
